Heritage Planning Report

HeritageCheck brings together public property records to help you understand a home's heritage status and history.

This report covers heritage protections, planning applications, energy certificates and nearby listed buildings. It includes radon mapping and links to official records and council services for further research.

Heritage protections

Conservation area

Not recorded as being in a conservation area.

The nearest recorded conservation area is Kenley Aerodrome, about 1447 metres away.

This is the result in the published boundary data checked. Council maps may contain newer or additional information; links are included for further research.

Maps show the location checked, not legal property boundaries.

Listed building

No listed-building match found

What matters is how the surroundings contribute to a listed building's historic or architectural significance, and how a change would affect that. Relevant factors include views, historic connections, the scale and appearance of new buildings, and noise or lighting. This report identifies nearby records; it does not assess those effects.

Article 4 directions

An Article 4 direction removes specific permitted development rights, so some work may need a planning application.

No Article 4 direction found in the published dataset.

An Article 4 direction was not confirmed, but this does not remove any other need for permission or consent.

The published dataset does not cover every council or direction. Council links are included for further research; no result is permission clearance.

Planning history

No matching planning applications found in the published London Datahub records.

Published applications describe proposals and decisions. They do not establish whether work was carried out or conditions were met.

Planning history is drawn from published Planning London Datahub records. Historic coverage varies; it is not a guaranteed complete lifetime history of the property.

Recorded progress dates concern the source scheme; they are not building-control compliance evidence.

EPC history

1 EPC certificate found for this property.

An Energy Performance Certificate (EPC) records energy efficiency at the assessment date. The search covers published certificates matched to this home.

GOV.UK EPC register

Potential is the assessor's estimate after the certificate's recommended improvements. It is not a guarantee or a current cost estimate.

Map numbers correspond to the records below. Distances are measured from the property; maps do not show legal boundaries.

1. Church of All Saints

Grade II · 245 m · Entry 1358795

Effects on a listed building's setting depend on views, historic connections, scale, appearance, noise and lighting. Distance alone does not decide this; this report does not assess those effects.

2. Kenley Station House (Original 1856 Building)

Grade II · 330 m · Entry 1388347

These checks use the selected point and nearby boundaries. They do not establish the extent of the entire plot.

Radon

Some parts of this 1km grid square are in bands of elevated radon potential. Maximum radon potential is 1-3 %. Check the radon potential of individual addresses at UKRadon.org

The 1 km grid shows the highest mapped radon potential within the square. This is an area estimate, not a measurement inside this home.

Council research

London Borough of Croydon

Council website

Use the council website to find heritage, Article 4, tree protection, planning search and building control services. Specific service links have not been verified.

Conservation areas and appraisals

Read the council guidance and follow its links to maps, appraisals and official documents.

Building control: further research (Croydon)

For further research, visit your council's building-control service to search available records or ask about approvals and completion certificates. The council may charge for document copies or searches.

Building control, enforcement and tree preservation orders were not searched. Councils hold these in separate systems with varying public access. Use the council links to research records or request documents; charges may apply.

No conservation area guide or plan found in the published dataset. Check the council guidance links above.

Report scope

The findings relate to the identified location and sources and dates shown. They do not establish every restriction, the full extent of listed-building protection, whether work needs consent or whether consent would be granted.

It does not confirm whether work is lawful, needs permission or is likely to be approved. The report includes no site inspection, structural assessment, valuation or official conveyancing search. The maps do not prove ownership or show exact legal boundaries. Official records and council rules can change after the dates shown.

Glossary

Article 4 direction

A direction made by a council that removes specific permitted development rights in a defined area. It does not ban the work, but it can mean a planning application is needed first.

Curtilage

Land and structures closely associated with a building, such as a garden, yard, wall or outbuilding. Its legal extent is not always the ownership boundary and can affect what is protected with a listed building.

Listed building

A building or structure protected for special architectural or historic interest. Unless expressly excluded, listing normally covers the whole building inside and outside, and may cover attached or curtilage structures.

Local planning authority

The council or other authority responsible for planning decisions at the property. It keeps local policies and maps, handles applications and can confirm whether a local restriction affects planned work.

Radon

A naturally occurring radioactive gas from rocks and soil. The map estimates potential across an area; it does not measure radon inside this home.

Scheduled monument

An archaeological site or monument included on the national schedule of protected sites. The report distinguishes a boundary at the property from one nearby.

Conservation area

An area recognised for special architectural or historic interest. Planning decisions should preserve or enhance its character, so some exterior work, demolition and tree work receives extra control.

EPC (Energy Performance Certificate)

A published assessment of energy efficiency, with an A-G rating and suggested improvements. Earlier certificates record how the home was assessed at the time.

Listed building grades

The three listed-building grades in England. Grade I means exceptional interest, Grade II* means particularly important and more than special interest, and Grade II means special interest. All three grades are protected.

Permitted development rights

National planning permission for certain types of work, subject to detailed limits and conditions. These rights can be restricted by the location, a planning condition or an Article 4 direction.

Registered park or garden

A designed landscape recorded by Historic England for its historic interest. A nearby entry is context; it does not mean this property is within it.

UPRN (Unique Property Reference Number)

An identifier for an addressable property. A building and its separate flats may each have their own UPRN; it does not define ownership or legal boundaries.
